A $23 million effort to restore Academy Square, the birthplace of BYU, will culminate with Saturday's dedication.

Dusting Off History

Storied past meets future in dedication

By Dave Buer

The story of the transformation of the Academy Building into the Provo Library at Academy Square is likely as interesting as any of the books the new library will hold.

The epic project, costing nearly $23 million, was completed a few weeks ago, and President Gordon B. Hinckley of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will dedicate the building Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The library opened for business Thursday.

Saturday's grand opening will feature local and state officials, along with religious leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ, said Gene Nelson, director of the Provo Library.

"We've invited some of the upper administration of the church to join us," Nelson said.

But bringing a building from the shadow of the wrecking ball to a breathtaking re-creation of one of the region's historic treasures has not been an easy task.

Sea Trek drowning financially

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY – Unless it gets funding soon, Sea Trek may sink.

Sixty stunned passengers on one of the tall ships traveling from Denmark to New York City were told they may have to abort re-enactment of the LDS pioneer migration to the United States and return to Europe.

Bill Sadleir, Sea Trek president, said a cash-flow problem is leading to the abrupt ending half way through a two-month trek. The voyage is intended to reenact the experience of 85,000 members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who crossed the ocean in the 19th century looking for a new life.

If the Sea Trek 2001 Foundation can raise $300,000 by Saturday, the three ships will continue on their trek.

If the money cannot be raised, only the Europa, a Dutch vessel, would continue to New York City with its 50 passengers, Sadleir said.

The sailing effort is not sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ, but it has generated enormous publicity for the faith throughout Scandinavia and the rest of Europe.

The floating party cost about $6 million, including fireworks at $50,000 a pop in ports in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Scotland and England. That figure also includes the staging of "Saints on the Seas," an original oratorio that cost about $75,000 per performance.

The cost of the eight ships that sailed in a flotilla for the first three weeks, plus the three scheduled to make the full crossing, is about $2.5 million.

Because the ships have not been filled to capacity, registration fees — which vary from $150 for one day up to $8,000 for the full 59 days — generated only about $1.6 million, Sadleir said.

Sadleir and his wife, DeAnn, contributed a large portion of the shortfall. But Sadleir said he is currently strapped for cash and has no more to give.

Captain Marcus Seidle of the Statsraad Lehmkuhl broke the news to his crew in a meeting below deck at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday. He told them that because Sea Trek had not made its promised payments, his superiors had informed him that the Canary Islands would be the end of the line.

The captain wept as he told them, then quickly apologized for his emotions, saying, "I haven't cried in over 20 years."

Dozens of people on the ship left school or quit other jobs to join the trek.

This was to be the Lehmkuhl's first Atlantic crossing since 1964.

From 'Real World' to 'Singles Ward': Julie's back

Julie Stoffer is back in Provo, and she's headed for the big screen.

The former BYU student, widely known for her role on MTV's "The Real World," is making a cameo appearance in "Singles Ward," a comedy about dating and single life as a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The film's producer, David Hunter, said he chose Stoffer because "she was a person who stuck out in Mormon's minds.

"I think people will be interested because it's her first time back in Utah and she got kicked out of BYU. And we just thought, 'You know, it'll be interesting to have her on board, see what she does'," said Hunter.

> "I tried not to make my religion a real critical part of the show. But how could it not be? I'm Mormon, it's a big part of my life."

Stoffer plays a temptress in the film, trying to seduce the movie's leading single man.

Since "The Real World," Stoffer has been living in Huntington Beach, Calif. While she doesn't think she's a celebrity, she does get the occasional "there goes the Mormon chick," she said.

"I tried not to make my religion a real critical part of the show. But how could it not be? I'm Mormon, it's a big part of my life," she said.

Stoffer said she has no awkward feelings about being back in Utah: "I love being here. I was on camera when all the controversy was going on. I found out about being kicked out of school from a reporter."

Still, Stoffer said she has no regrets.

"I would do it all over again, ten fold. I had such a fun experience. I don't love the way the show was edited, but I have no control over that," she said.

For now, Stoffer said she's focusing on her film work, and her fellow cast and crew-mates are supportive of her.

"I can't say anything because I don't want to be hypocritical," Hunter said.

Other famous members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints appearing in the film include former basketball great Danny Ainge, TV/film star Gordon Jump from "WKRP In Cincinatti" and baseball star Wally Joyner.

The film is due out in January 2002 and will be released regionally and then nationally on video.

U.S., China to talk in Washington

WASHINGTON — Chinese Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan will hold talks in Washington on Sept. 21 with Secretary of State Colin Powell, the State Department announced Thursday.

Tang's visit will set the stage for President Bush's trip to China in mid-October. Among the topics due for discussion are China's assertion that it intends to build up its nuclear forces and a U.S. complaint that a Chinese company sent missile technology to Pakistan.

A Chinese official said Wednesday the two sides soon would discuss the human rights situation in China, but it was not clear whether separate talks would be set up.

The diplomat said China intends to modernize its forces whether or not the United States follows through with development of a defense against long-range missiles.

Upgrading is a natural development along with growth of the Chinese economy, the official told reporters at the Chinese Embassy, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Missile sale to Taiwan concerns China

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Taiwan wants to buy 40 Maverick air-to-ground missiles from the United States, a deal Beijing warned Thursday would harm U.S.-China relations and raise tensions in the Taiwan Strait.

The Taiwanese are considering arming their F-16 jets with the AGM-65G Maverick missiles so the planes would be better able to stop an amphibious attack, the U.S. Defense Security Cooperation Agency said in a news release. American jets have used the missiles in attacks on Iraq.

American weapons sales to this island anger China because a well-armed Taiwan is better able to resist Chinese pressure to reunify. The two sides split amid civil war five decades ago, and Beijing has threatened to use force to reclaim Taiwan, which lies about 100 miles off China's southeastern coast.

Suspect steers Calif. police on chase

NEWMAN, Calif. — A suspect in a double murder led police on a 110 mph chase Thursday, then holed up in his crippled automobile as officers surrounded him. The standoff forced the closure of Interstate 5.

Two hostage negotiators were with police at the highway outside Newman, trying to persuade Joaquin Gutierrez, 39, to surrender as a SWAT team sharpshooter lay in a strip of grass nearby. Gutierrez led police on a chase reaching speeds of 110 mph through Bay Area rush-hour traffic Thursday morning.

California Highway Patrol officers ended the chase by throwing a strip of spikes in front of his car, which popped his tires. Gutierrez then sat in his car on Interstate 5, near the border of Stanislaus and Merced counties, with a gun to his chest and told police they would not take him alive.

Gutierrez is named in a warrant in the June 23 killing of his wife, Guadalupe Gutierrez, 40, and a 15-year-old stepson. His two other stepchildren were present during the shooting, which happened as the couple were in the process of separating, police said.

Two Palestinians killed by Israeli attack

JERUSALEM — Israeli helicopters on Thursday fired missiles at a jeep carrying four Palestinian gunmen and killed two, but Israel's declared target, a local militia chief blamed for the deaths of six Israelis, escaped with light injuries.

The targeted man, Raed Karmi, was in a jeep driving near the Nur Shams refugee camp on the outskirts of Tulkarem when the first missile hit the ground behind the vehicle, said Karmi's bodyguard and driver, Hazem Kattab.

Karmi, 27, and Kattab jumped out of the vehicle, the witness said. A second and third missile hit the jeep directly, killing the two men in the back, identified as Omar Subuh and Mustafa Unbouth, both 20.

The two survivors were hurt by shrapnel and were taken to Tulkarem hospital, doctors said. Three bystanders were also injured.

"Unfortunately, we did not achieve our main goal," Gideon Meir, an Israeli Foreign Ministry official, said when it became apparent Karmi had not been killed.

Mexican president presents plan to Congr

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Vicente Fox pressed his case for swift immigration overhaul to Congress on Thursday. President Bush called proposals to grant legal status to Mexicans now in the country illegally "an incredibly complex issue."

Bush suggested it was unlikely that Congress would be able to come up with a plan within the year suggested by Fox.

"I fully understand President Fox's desire to expedite — to come up with a solution. We are going to do that," Bush told a joint news conference with the Mexican president.

"We have heard his call," he said.

Bush said that a major obstacle was devising a system that would allow many of the up to 3 million Mexicans now in the United States illegally to gain legal status — without penalizing those who have already applied for such status though existing channels.

Earlier, Fox addressed a packed joint session of the House and Senate, urging greater trust between the neighboring countries as the basis for "a new partnership in North America."

"Trust will be essential to achieve our goals," Fox said.

On Wednesday, Fox surprised Bush administration officials by suggesting that immigration overhaul be completed by the end of this year.

He did not mention such a timetable in his remarks to Congress.

Sentiment on Capitol Hill runs strong on both sides of the immigration issue. And administration officials have suggested it was unlikely that a formula could be worked out by the end of this year given these congressional divisions.

"There are many in this country who are undocumented. We want to make sure that their labor is legal," Bush said. But, he asked, "How do we match a willing employer with a willing employee?"

Bush said that his administration and Congress needed to "think creatively" on expanding the current U.S. guest worker program so more Mexicans could obtain "green cards" designating legal standing.

"I'm willing to consider ways for a guest worker to earn a green card status and yet I fully recognize there are a lot of people who have stood in line who have said 'I will abide by the laws of the United States,'" Bush said.

"We're trying to work though a formula that will not penalize the person who has chosen the legal route and at the same time recognize the contribution the undocumented (worker) has made," he added.

"This is an incredibly complex issue. ... To make matters even more complicated, we have to work with Congress," Bush said.

Bush also called on Congress to deliver on two requests of the Mexican president: lifting restrictions on Mexican trucks on U.S. highways and suspending a program requiring Mexico to get annual certification that it has cooperated in the war against drugs.

He repeated a veto threat against legislation to extend the ban on Mexican trucks.

In his address, Fox switched back and forth between English and Spanish.

Fox said that he and President Bush in recent months "have already shown our willingness to trust each other by agreeing to discuss this most complex matter."

"As the history of this country shows, migration has always rendered more economic benefits to the United States than the cost it entails.

Kirk Rich, banquet chef for dining services, said he has noticed a difference.

"We do have a broader focus. The menu is more varied and we try to bring in different types of cuisine," he said.

Fresh salsa, chutney and sources of protein like duck and lamb are all new to the dining menus, Rich said.

Another distinction of dining services is its insistence of adhering to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Word of Wisdom.

"People can't believe we can cook fine cuisine without alcohol," Wright said. Instead, substitutions of fresh fruit and fresh fruit juices are used and help provide a unique flavor, he said.

With new techniques, new menus and a new attitude, BYU Dining Services has seen the fruits of its labor.

The Loyal E. Horton Award, given to the Creamery on Ninth, and the Silver Plate Award, given by the International Food Manufacturers, adds two more distinctions to BYU's awards wall.

In addition to the awards earned by the various dining services offered, Dean Wright has earned one himself.

Wright received the Minah Distinguished Service Award, given by the National Association of College & University Food Services. After 26 years in the foodservice business at eight colleges and universities, Wright earned the award, the highest honor of its kind.

The quality of BYU's food service has not escaped student's notice.

"I used to work in the MOA and the food was yummy," said Emily Hansen, 19, a junior from New Orleans majoring in psychology.

"Plus, the Cougareat is clean and there's management everywhere. It's nice to be on a campus that wins awards," she said.

Some students have had the chance to compare BYU's dining services with other schools.

"My friends go to other schools, and we have it pretty good," said Becca Storrs, 19, a sophomore from Arvada, Colo., majoring in nursing.

MEMBERSHIP GUIDELINES
BYU and Orem College Stakes
Fall 2001

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has established married and single student stakes for Provo and Orem area students. These stakes have been divided into an appropriate number of wards, providing opportunities for worship and service in the Church.

The following are important guidelines concerning ward membership. Quotes are from the General Handbook or Instructions, Book 1.

1. "Single students who live in housing that is located on campus or owned by the University should be members of a student ward...that includes their living quarters in its boundaries" (145).

2. "Single students who live away from home but off campus may choose to be members of a student ward or of the conventional ward where they reside. If there is more than one student ward in the area, and if students choose to attend a student ward, they should be members of the ward that includes their living quarters in its boundaries" (145).

3. "Unmarried students who live with their parents normally remain in their conventional wards" (145). Exceptions must be approved by the parents, by both bishops, and by both stake presidents. The students may then attend the student ward that includes their parents' home in its boundaries.

4. "Unmarried members who are not students do not normally attend student wards. Exceptions may be made in stakes that do not have a single member ward if the Bishop of the home ward feels that it would be in the member's best interest to belong to a student ward. Such exceptions must be approved by the parents (where appropriate), by both bishops, and by both stake presidents" (145).

5. "Unmarried members, ages 18 through 20,who live with their parents normally remain in their conventional ward. If they live away from home, they may attend the young single adult ward" (144).

6. "Married students may choose to be members of either a [married] student ward or the conventional ward where they reside" (145).

7. Married students living in BYU married student housing attend the married student ward that includes their living quarters in its boundaries.

8. "Single parents with children at home normally remain in their conventional ward so the children will have the benefit of Primary and youth programs" (145).

9. Asian students may attend the ward that includes their living quarters in its boundaries. Or they may attend the Asian 2nd or 3rd wards (singles), the Chinese Ward, or the Korean Branch.

ing became the heart of the fledgling school, renamed Brigham Young University in 1903, according to a timeline provided by Terry Ann Harward, Provo library executive assistant.

The critical role of Academy Square, which included the academy and other school buildings, began to diminish when the university dedicated University Hill as the site of the "University of Zion" in 1908, according to the timeline.

The building continued to house classes in chemistry, geology and art, and it boasted a library, high school classes and dorm facilities, said Lee Bartlett, president of Brigham Young Academy Foundation (BYAF).

In 1968, the Academy Building finally closed its doors, beginning more than three decades of neglect and abuse.

The Bond

City leaders and various owners struggled to find a purpose for the square and its buildings, even considering tearing them down to make way for a commercial development, Bartlett said.

Then the Utah Heritage Foundation stepped in and successfully shielded the square from demolition.

That set off a bitter series of lawsuits between Provo city officials and the Utah Heritage Foundation as the city sought to develop the land.

By the late 1990s, Provo had outgrown its library and was struggling to find more space, Harward said.

Doug Smoot, a member of BYAF, proposed a feasibility study to be conducted on the square to see if a library could be housed there, Bartlett said.

The findings of the study indicated the library could be placed there, but city officials did not want to try to put a modern, high-tech library in decrepit buildings.

The breakthrough came, Harward said, when the Utah Heritage Foundation agreed to allow the other buildings on Academy Square to be demolished to make room for a new addition that would be connected to the renovated Academy Building.

City officials agreed, but said BYAF would have to raise the $6-7 million difference between the $16 million bond and the proposed $23 million cost of the library at Academy Square, Bartlett said.

BYAF did just that, receiving key $1 million donations from the Church of Jesus Christ's charitable foundation and the Eccles Foundation, Bartlett said.

"Securing those two was critical because it lent credibility to the Academy Foundation's belief that we could in fact raise the money," Bartlett said.

A vigorous campaign to promote the library bond was launched in the face of vocal opposition, but was ultimately approved by voters.

The birthplace of BYU and the former heart of a community had received a new lease on life.

The Talent

The transformation of the Academy Building has required the talents of some of the nation's most respected artisans and artists.

Woodwork on the 19th century building has been recreated by BDL Mills, whose next project is the Church of Jesus Christ's Nauvoo Temple, said mill manager John Norman.

Woodworkers for the company imitated the moldings and hand-carved rosettes that are indicative of the high-end nature of the building, Norman said.

A stained glass window entitled "Passages of Light" was designed by Mac Magleby, creative director for BYU's University Press. Magleby is also designing posters for the 2002 Winter Olympics.

File photo

Academy Square, in its abandoned condition in 1994, was nearly demolished to make way for commercial development.

The piece is a metaphor using glass and light to depict a view of Utah Lake at sunset, with a woman on the shore reading a book whose pages turn into a flying dove, Magleby said.

"As the person reads passages in the book, the light of truth and knowledge is opened up and can take flight," Magleby said.

Another stained glass window will be brought home to the building after spending years in a garage in California, Harward said.

After seeing vandals breaking the windows in the building, two men stole up to the second floor of the building late one night to save the window. After a little convincing, the window has been returned and minor repairs have restored it to its original condition, Harward said.

The new library will have a permanent art gallery — a natural fit, Stilson said, for the building that used to house the art department of Brigham Young Academy.

Looking for something to do

Students find inexpensive entertainment

"Fun things to do in Provo?" Some BYU students may look quizzically at this question as if the words "fun" and "Provo" shouldn't belong in the same sentence.

However, after a moment of thought, several students have come up with activities that can be found in Provo, ranging from shooting pool to shooting stars.

Provo is the home of Ozz, which manager Steve Lin claims to be the largest pool hall in the state.

"We take students to help them relieve the stress of school and meet new friends," Lin said.

For the more outdoor minded, Kim Morgan, 17, a freshman majoring in visual arts from Wis., said, "I love going star-gazing up in the mountains."

Students can have the experience of climbing those mountains at a nearby rock climbing facility, The Quarry, without even leaving the valley.

"It's something you can do all year long. And it helps you overcome the fear of heights," said Steve Ting, 24, a senior majoring in computer science from Claremont, Calif.

"If you're going with other guys, it's a great macho activity. And it gives you a really good workout," Ting said.

For when he's not hanging out with just the guys, Ting said bowling at Regal Recreation is a good and inexpensive group date.

Laser Assault's strobe-lit arena is another great place for a big group date with an element of fun and danger.

Aaron Dockter, 22, a junior majoring in computer science from Brentwood, Calif., said he likes to have fun and wear himself out at the Extreme Fun Center in Orem.

"They've got really big punching gloves to punch people with. They also have a plastic riding bull that kinda hurts, but it's fun," Dockter said.

Among the activities at Extreme is an 8,000-foot indoor ropes course. Dockter said he enjoys the challenges there even if "everything smells like dirty socks because everyone has to take off their shoes."

A hot spot for the frugal BYU student is Movies 8 on 50-cent Tuesdays.

Dockter said he and 19 friends took up 20 seats in a Movies 8 theater to welcome in the new semester.

"Twenty people for $10," he said.

For smaller groups, Ben Mudrick, 22, a sophomore majoring in political science from Reston, Va., finds fun at Trafalga Family Fun Center.

"It's a great date because it's not too expensive, but you can still be funny and show off your put-put skills," Mudrick said.

Whenever everything else is closed, students can join the crowd hanging out at Smith's.

Provo eateries offer a variety of tasty treats

Provo may be small and cloistered, but it has its share of restaurant variety.

There are Mexican, Italian, Chinese, American, Polynesian and other types of restaurants in the area.

But which eateries, really, are students favorites?

Mindy Pitts, 21, a senior from Rochester, N.Y., majoring in communications, said one of her favorite restaurants is Ottavio's, an Italian restaurant.

"The ambiance of the restaurant makes the food better," Pitts said.

Rachel Schott, 20, a junior from Vancouver, Wash., majoring in accounting, said she likes Chinese and The China Lily restaurant is one of her favorites because of its food.

Jed Terry, 22, a sophomore from Seattle, Wash., majoring in political science, said his favorite place to eat in Provo with his friends is Guru's.

"It has good food and it's cheap, with a large variety of choices," he said.

Shanna Lillywhite, 21, a senior from Centerville, Davis County, named Café Rio as her top choice.

"You always see people that you know there," she said.

Pitts also said that she liked it, but that it's always busy.

"Café Rio is a good place for a casual meal," Pitts said.

Bryce Dalley, 22, a junior from Salt Lake majoring in business finance said he also enjoys going to Cafe Rio.

"It's cheap, but it's better than fast food," he said.

Jared Sine, 22, a junior from Salt Lake City majoring in economics, said that Mexican was his favorite food. His favorite restaurant, however, is Diego's.

"It's a tiny little taco shop, cheap and really good," Sine said.

He compared Diego's to going to Mexico, with a great atmosphere and authentic-tasting food.

"It's like a little slice of Mexico right in the heart of Provo," Sine said.

Wherever students choose to dine in Provo, there are plenty of restaurants to fit anyone's taste.

Outdoor activities popular among college students

By Irinna Schwenke

Although chilly winds are slowly creeping through the cracks of the Wasatch Mountains, the sunny afternoons still give hints of summer — a time when sunbathing and swimming take precedence over reading and writing.

School may be in session, but with only a couple weeks left of warm weather, students can still take advantage of some outdoor summer fun.

With Provo Canyon, the Wasatch Mountains and the Provo River within minutes, recreational fun is right around the corner.

"The mountains around here are excellent for rock climbing. They're world-renowned," said David Brown, 18, a freshman from American Fork majoring in psychology.

Outdoor activities might even be safer than most think.

As dangerous as crawling through caves and climbing up mountains may sound, the actual risk is lower than perceived, said Dave Webb, manager of recreation services at BYU.

Rock climbing and river rafting are statistically safer than things like playing basketball and football, Webb said.

"If you were to rock climb for one million hours, you'd die once. If you were playing flag football for one million hours, you'd die six times," he said.

Although the perception of outdoor activities, for some, is that they are too dangerous to try, with the right equipment and the right people, anyone can find safe fun outdoors, Webb said.

"The most dangerous part of rafting and rock climbing is driving in the car to get to the activity," he said. "Its all about perception vs. reality."

Outdoor activities available in the area include camping, mountain climbing, caving and bike riding, said Kong Davis, 24, climbing supervisor at Outdoors Unlimited and a senior from Knoxville, Tenn., majoring in recreation management.

Hiking Squaw Peak and Y Mountain have long been BYU traditions. But for more adventurous spirits, throwing off the hiking boots and rocking climbing to the top has become popular, Davis said.

"Climbing gives you a big-time rush. It's really surreal, and it's a great way to get away from the social scene for a while," said Kristen Kinjo, 18, a freshman, from Idaho Falls, Idaho.

If mountains aren't in the picture, the raging rapids of the Provo River can keep students cool. Tubes can be rented at Bridal Veil Falls, Davis said.

"Make sure that you go with people who know what they're doing and have the right equipment," Davis said.

Another popular activity around Provo Canyon is caving. Some students tackle the popular "Nutty Putty" caves, a 45-minute drive away.

Local theaters provide plenty of classic drama

Each has its own characteristics, its own flavor and its own charm. It echoes with culture, talent, heroes and villains. Yes, it's where the guy usually gets the girl and there's a few tears shed.

It's the theater.

The Provo-Orem area has several theaters that provide entertainment a step up on the cultural scale.

From the ballet to the symphony to student productions, the Harris Fine Arts Center provides the campus community with a source of entertainment, as well as a stage for professional and student works.

On campus there are several theaters and halls, ranging from the de Jong Concert Hall, which houses most of the productions, to the Nelke Experimental Theatre, where smaller, sometimes student works, grace the stage.

Katie Van Houten, 21, from Salem, Utah County, majoring in marriage, family and human development, said she likes the fine arts center productions because they are quality shows that are close.

"Most (others) are in Salt Lake City. Before I was married, I didn't have a car, so it was easier," she said.

Van Houten also likes it for the exposure to cultural events.

"It makes people aware of what's not right here in Provo," Van Houten said.

The Harris Fine Arts Center hosts the Utah Symphony, on-campus dance and musical groups, ballets and plays.

Away from campus are two Orem theaters that add their own spice to the theater mix.

The Hale Center Theater features a "theater-in-the-round." The theater has a square stage with seating around the stage.

"It makes you feel like you're right in the action," said Claire Kenny, 20, a junior from Provo majoring in American studies.

"It's good, clean fun for the whole family," Kenny said.

This fall, the theater's program includes "Cash on Delivery," "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" and "A Christmas Carol."

Another theater in Orem is the SCERA. It features an outdoor theater, open from May through September, and an indoor theater that houses the shows for the fall and winter months.

"We do mostly musicals," said April Wetzel, SCERA's marketing director.

The productions at SCERA are community productions and sometimes they do exchanges with other cities to add variety.

The indoor show house features a balcony and love seats, Wetzel said.

"We like to cater to the student and family audience," Wetzel said.

For the 2001-2002 season, the program includes "Robin Hood," "The King and I," "Footloose" and "Anything Goes."

Olympic officials say farmer abuses logo with corn maze

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A farmer who pruned a cornfield maze into the shape of the interlocking Olympic rings is in trouble with Winter Games officials, who say the man is plucking their profits.

The cornstalks in Steve Ames' Farmington field stand in the shape of the five Olympic rings and feature the logo of an Olympic sponsor.

The Salt Lake Organizing Committee's brand-protection department is telling Ames to either plow the corn under or alter the crop so it no longer looks like the Olympic logo.

Ames says he has an e-mail message indicating that the sponsor, Nu Skin Enterprises, gave the OK for using the Olympic insignia.

But SLOC officials say no one can use the Olympic rings without paying a price — $10,000 by one account.

Nu Skin officials now say they want their logo out of the field as well.

"It'll be pretty difficult," Ames said Thursday. "It's kind of like, what's the big deal? Just leave it alone. I can't alter it overnight."

Nu Skin spokesman Larry Macfarlane said Ames was told he'd have to get approval from SLOC.

"The more we look at it, the more we're unhappy with it," Macfarlane said.

But Ames says he has an e-mail message, signed by the company's Olympic marketing director, that reads "thanks for doing this."

Linda Lucetti, a spokeswoman for Olympic marketing, said no one is trying to hurt Ames or his business.

"We just think it's a misunderstanding all around, and we're working to resolve it amicably," Lucetti said. "We want to protect the marks without taking away everyone's enthusiasm for the games."

Others in the corn-maze business aren't happy with Ames either. Brett Herbst, and American Fork corn-maze grower, said Olympic officials wanted $10,000 to let him crop the rings into one of his fields.

The price was too steep for Herbst, and he said he doesn't think it's fair for Ames to use the Olympic rings to lure people to his field.

ctly the same," sen- ior linebacker Justin Ena said.

Crowton's coaching strategy, featuring a spread-out, pass-happy offensive assault, is in many ways reminiscent of Edwards' style.

"My strength as a coach has been on the offensive side," Crowton said. "I've taken the offensive side and added my own strengths, [but] maintained the original philosophy of Edwards."

Other players said Crowton's style, while similar to that of Edwards, is different enough to get the players excited for the season.

"There's new life and new blood in the program now," senior offensive lineman Aaron McCubbins said. He said his teammates are also excited about Crowton's program.

Despite the big shoes to fill, Crowton said he does not feel much pressure from the heavy scutiny of others. He's certainly not afraid of criticism from Edwards.

"LaVell has been very influential in my life as far as how to deal with people," Crowton said.

Aside from football, Crowton said Edwards has been ready and willing to help him and his family adjust to their new surroundings.

While Crowton counts Edwards as one of his major influences, he said he has been lucky to work with many reputed football minds over the years.

As a coaching assistant at BYU in 1982, Crowton was able to work with quarterback coach Mike Holmgren, now the head coach of the Seattle Seahawks.

Crowton also worked with Hall of Fame quarterback Steve Young.

Other major influences in Crowton's life are Tom Coughlin, currently the head coach of the Jacksonville Jaguars, and William Bowes, the former head coach of the University of New Hampshire.

Even while working with these highly successful men, Crowton developed a distinct reputation of his own.

As the head coach of Louisiana Tech for three years, the Bulldogs scored more than 50 points in eight different games, and more than 60 points in five games. The team's 9-2 record in 1997 was the best record in the team's Division 1-A history.

Teams from across the country sent scouts and staff members to learn from Crowton's style.

Crowton followed this effort with a two-year stint in the National Football League as the offensive coordinator for the Chicago Bears. During the 2000 season, the Bears were ranked third in the NFL in passing yards.

Crowton said all these experiences have prepared him for his current role.

"It's helped me understand people, relationships, coaches, people from different areas of the country," Crowton said. "It's also helped me to be patient."

However, Crowton said the players he coaches here at BYU differ significantly from other players he has worked with.

"I appreciate the promptness and mature attitude of the players here," Crowton said. He said he has enjoyed their willingness to do tasks when asked.

Crowton said the number of returned missionaries on the team has made a difference.

"They're older and more mature (than many college players). It's a lot like being in the NFL as opposed to being in college," Crowton said.

Crowton has already implemented some team goals, including altering the fitness and conditioning programs of the players and spending more time working on special teams plays.

He said a big factor in the team's success so far has been their comraderie and hard work from the very beginning.

"I believe we've had good things happen to us thanks to our preparation before the season. It began all the way back before fall," said Crowton.

"I think we're a lot closer than many of the teams I've been on," McCubbins said. "We're always laughing and having fun."

Crowton has also made "winning" goals: he hopes to have a winning season, a win in the Mountain West Conference Championship, and a win in a bowl game.

Most of all, Crowton hopes to instill in his players a sense of what football can teach them and what they can accomplish in the future.

"Football is important because there's a commitment there, but it's not the most important thing," Crowton said.

"It's about sacrifice and hard work; about being a good father and community member.

"Those are the lessons that will stay with (the players) forever, regardless of whether they win or lose."

new all-sport cards its bought every tick- he said.

its of all-sport cards ," Miles said. "The redibly cheap and students avoid the hassle of having to buy tickets for every event."

"As a result we see more students at the games," he said.

That's one benefit of the card, but there are also problems.

With the benefit of an all-sport card it becomes easier for students to abuse the system, Miles said. "We want to make sure the system stays the way it was designed."

Miles said the ticket office is aware of the resale market going on and they are concerned about it.

"Students need to be careful about abusing the system," he said.

The tickets sold with the all-sport cards are reserved for students. But with tickets being sold to non-students, the administration might start requiring students to show I.D. when entering the game, Miles said.

"We are probably going to have to tighten up," he said.

The all-sport cards and football tickets went on sale Aug. 30 in the Marriott Center.

Miles said he was pleasantly surprised at the number of students who came so early in the morning to buy tickets.

"It was more than expected," he said.

In the first four hours after the tickets went on sale more than 8,000 tickets were sold, Miles said.

Jennifer Bennet, 23, a junior majoring in Spanish from Boise, Idaho, a member of the events staff, said most students who came to buy tickets had great attitudes and looked forward to the games this year.

"I've seen a lot of huge groups buying tickets together," she said.

Dave Ray, 25, a senior from Darthmouth, Nova Scotia, majoring in accounting, said he bought tickets with his friends.

"I buy the all-sport pass to cheer the Cougars," he said.

Some students even set up camp outside the Marriott Center the day before tickets went on sale, Miles said.

"But it does not matter when you come to buy tickets. Students who choose to camp out to be the first in line don't get any better tickets than someone who buys it a few hours later," he said.

BYU uses a rotating system for its football games.

Miles said BYU is the only school in the nation who completely follows the true rotation system when assigning football tickets.

This means a fixed number of seats are blocked out for students. The seats rotate to different places each game and each group rotates together, he said.

"BYU started this system in 1987 to make it easier for the students," Miles said. "All students get a fair chance of getting a good seat."

Students who have not yet bought tickets and all-sport cards can still buy them at the Marriott Center throughout the football season.

Sports packets cost $65 and include football tickets and an all-sport card.

This will allow students to attend all designated campus athletic events.

Last week the Marriott Center was lined with sleeping bags and students singing songs and playing games in the wee hours of the morning.

No, tickets weren't going on sale for the latest boy band concert. Instead, the doors were opening for the sale of this year's All-sport passes. The No. 1 draw for these all-nighters was the hopes of getting good seats for the upcoming football season.

With two wins under their belt, a new head coach, and some promising recruits, this year's football team may have what it takes to bring glory days back to LaVell Edwards Stadium.

But it is the fans wildly waving BYU signs, wearing blue and white paint from head to toe and carrying babies decked out in mini BYU paraphernalia, who truly are the heart and soul of Cougar football.

So what's the big deal? A quarter of the people in the stands at the BYU v. Nevada game probably didn't even know the difference between a first down and a touchdown.

So what motivates thousands of students and families to make the trek to Lavell Edwards Stadium year after year?

Some go for the social atmosphere, while others go for the pure love of the game. But whatever the reason, one thing remains constant. Young or old, everyone has pride. Whether it's pride for the team or school pride, fans aren't afraid to show they're true blue.

"It's important to show our support for our school and the athletes," said Mike Norton, 21, a sophomore from Beaverton, Ore. majoring in microbiology. "Besides, it's hecka fun."

Many students also have fun dying their hair blue or wearing funky wigs to show their spirit. Others wave signs with messages like "Luke you are my hero."

With chants of B-Y-U resounding through the stadium and hundreds of cheers and jeers shaking the stands, it is no wonder students would rather be at a football game than in the classroom.

"The games are a good stress relief from school. Screaming and jumping around is a good way to get the aggression out from classes," said Malinda Vance, 21, a senior majoring in sociology, from Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Kellie Williams, 19, a sophomore from South Jordan, Salt Lake County, majoring in speech pathology, bought football tickets with her ward because the games are a good way to socialize.

"I like going with my friends and we like checking out the people at the games," Williams said.

Virtual ads were virtually unexpected

By Jeff Oliver

The football field at LaVell Edwards Stadium is not named after AT&T Wireless and the BYU football team is certainly not an "authorized dealer."

That is what Michael Deaver, marketing director for the BYU athletic department, was thinking when BYU running back Luke Staley ran eight yards to score the first of seven Cougar touchdowns Saturday.

Deaver was watching the game on TV but he wasn't watching Staley. Instead his eyes were somewhere between the 20 and 30 yard line where a black and blue banner seemed have painted itself directly on the field.

The 10-yard-long digital advertisement for AT&T made several debut appearances on both sides of the field Saturday, complimenting the yellow line that periodically marked first-down yardage.

The line was expected. It was the advertisement that surprised almost everyone involved with BYU athletics, except, of course, those who were actually on the field — they never saw the line or the ad.

The same company and the same technology was responsible for both digital apparitions.

SportsWest, the production team behind Saturday's broadcast, informed BYU nearly a year ago that the technology for "virtual signage" was available and would soon be used, however, no one knew exactly when or how, Deaver said.

Apparently Saturday's unveiling wasn't what he expected.

"It made the impression that it was the AT&T field at LaVell Edwards Stadium," Deaver said.

Duff Tittle, associate athletic director for external relations, said the size of the ephemeral advertisement was "disproportionate and funny."

"The thing was as big as the logo we had in the Cotton Bowl," Tittle said.

The BYU Athletic Department was already concerned about over-commercialization and is worried the ad may have crossed the line, he said.

For the most part, Dan Checketts, vice president and general manager of SportsWest, agreed with him.

Checketts called Saturday's game an experiment — not a particularly successful one.

The advertisement was, indeed, bigger then it should have been, he said.

"I did not like the way it looked. It irked me."

However, the technology represents a potential source of revenue for SportsWest, and with each game carrying a $30,000 price tag, any source of revenue becomes significant.

"I'm not going to say we're not going to use the technology again, because we will," Checketts said.

Because the advertisement is not actually placed within the stadium there is little Tittle or anyone at BYU can do but complain.

However Checketts said he is not unsympathetic.

"I don't want to take away from the field, it's a concern to me."

He said future advertisements will be smaller and clearer and will likely be place somewhere on the edge rather then in the middle of the field.

"Its my job to make sure it doesn't become intrusive," he said.

Still, Tittle said the technology worries him.

"KSL will not put anything there to embarrass us. What if it's an ESPN broadcast?"

said the key to survive ion is for the players to be self-motivated — both on the field and in the classroom. Although it's a constant battle, he is confident they can handle it.

"It's awesome. The majority (of players) have goals. They are good kids, they have values, and are a lot of fun," Tidwell said.

The newest players have the greatest need for motivation. "It's hard to keep the new players patient, because they may not be playing much. But if they keep working hard, their opportunities will open up," Tidwell said.

The coaching staff motivates their players by showing them examples and demonstrating what academics can do for them, he said.

But the football coaches aren't the only motivators. Some of the most effective motivators are fellow teammates.

Freshman Aaron Francisco, 18, from Laie, Hawaii, said he looks up to his teammate, Justin Ena.

"He's a great motivator," Francisco said. "He knows I'm young and he told me to keep my head up to keep a good attitude and have fun. Eventually I'll get my chance to show myself."

Francisco said he finds himself working harder and learning much more as he trains with the veteran players instead of red shirting with the rest of the freshman.

"It's good because you get used to the program and it helps you to get ahead," he said.

For line backer Justin Ena, a 23-year-old senior from Shelton, Wash., majoring in history, football is all about having fun.

"You can look at football as a negative thing or look at it as a blessing and have fun," he said. Ena plays for the love of the game.

His way of surviving football and college life is to balance the two activities 50-50. "We are in college now, you should be able to balance things," he said.

Ena said open communication helped his transition. Now he's helping others like Francisco. However, he was surprised to find out the freshman looked up to him.

"It's fun to see such talent come right out of high school," Ena said. "It's also great to see ... new players dedicating themselves."

Y wide receivers aim for success

By Brian Carlson
bdc35@email.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The BYU wide receiving corps has been referred to as one of the weakest positions on the team.

But the wide receivers are out to prove the Cougar passing game should not be overlooked.

According to the Deseret News' pre-season projections, the wide receivers were given a C+, the lowest rating on the team.

The wide receivers are missing key players Margin Hooks and Jonathan Pittman this year. Last season, the pair combined for more than 1,400 of BYU's 3,295 receiving yards, according to Athletic Media Relations.

Despite the disheartening forecast, offensive coordinator/wide receivers coach Mike Borich said he is not concerned.

"The guys that we have here have been around the program for a long time. They understand coverages, they're far ahead — a lot further ahead of most guys that haven't had as much game experience," Borich said.

He said each player has one area in which they excel, which adds to the versatility of the offense.

"I think you should be able to see the most physical group of receivers that will ever step foot on the field," Borich said.

He said the players have focused on working in the off-season, studying the plays throughout the week, and helping the wide outs to gain confidence in themselves.

The players have noticed the difference.

"I think Coach Borich has worked miracles with us," said Reno Mahe, a junior from Salt Lake City, majoring in sociology.

Mahe has already put in some eye-catching performances this season. After two games, he led the team in receiving yards with 18 receptions for 199 yards and a touchdown.

Fellow teammate Mike Rigell has grabbed five passes for 88 yards. Rigell said he has no worries about the new coaching program.

> "I think you should be able to see the most physical group of receivers that will ever step foot on the field."
> — Mlke Borich, wide receiver coach

"I think everybody's kind of molded into it now and they believe in the system," Rigell said.

Borich has been known for his ability to turn receivers into playmakers.

In Chicago, he coached Bobby Engram and Marcus Robinson who combined for 172 catches — the most ever in a season by a Chicago Bears duo.

If he can achieve comparable success at BYU, the Cougars' wide receivers will put the negative predictions to shame.

Cougars to battle with Golden Bears on the road

By Adrianne Nash
adrianne@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Associate Sports Editor

The Cougars will take their offense on the road for the rest of September, beginning Saturday when they take on the California Golden Bears.

BYU has only faced California one other time, in 1999. The Cougars defeated the Bears 38-28 in Provo.

The Golden Bears, 0-1, lost their first game this season against Illinois, 44-17.

However, BYU coaches and players are not expecting a fast-shooting, high-scoring victory.

BYU Football head coach Gary Crowton said the California team, with its tight defensive schemes, might be the team's biggest challenge so far this season.

"The other two teams (Tulane and Nevada) are known for their offense, this team is known for its defense, so it's a whole different challenge," Crowton said.

According to Crowton, the Cal team will be more controlling with the ball.

"Cal has a very good defensive team, and they have a new offensive coordinator, so they should be improving," Crowton said.

On a coaching level, the game will be doubly significant. Tom Holmoe, the Cal head coach, is a BYU alumnus. He was a starting cornerback for three years, earning all-conference honors his senior year.

Holmoe has faced Crowton before as a coach, when Crowton was head coach of the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs in 1997. The Bulldogs won that game 41-34.

Holmoe said Crowton has created an offense at BYU very similar to the one he used as coach of the Bulldogs.

"I think if you go back and look at the film, you can see that they run a lot of the same plays," Holmoe said.

Crowton also said Cal's running backs will present a big challenge to the BYU defense.

BYU will particularly keep an eye on Joe Igber, Cal's junior running back, who achieved 116 rushing yards in the Illinois game.

Crowton said quarterback Brandon Doman has been carefully studying Cal's defense to determine the coverage the Bears will employ against BYU receivers.

"I'm very confident going into this game, but I still believe if we make mistakes and we don't execute like we have been, things could change instantly," Crowton said.

Cougar football seeing double with Staley brothers

By Martin Harris
mrh44@email.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

For BYU opponents it does not matter if the Cougars are on offense or defense, there is always a Staley on the field to contend with.

Dustin and Luke Staley have roamed the Cougar sidelines together for the last two seasons. Dustin came to the Y first in 1994, but after redshirting that season and seeing limited time the next year he served a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Houston.

The two years Dustin was away gave the youngest Staley a chance to catch up to his brother. Luke starred in high school football, like his two brothers (the oldest being Trent) before him. Luke was also an all-state athlete in basketball and track.

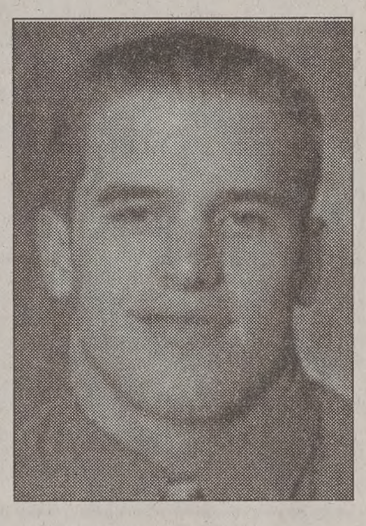
"Growing up with older brothers and watching them play football, I wanted to do what they did," Luke said.

Dustin related a story from when they were younger and Luke would follow Dustin and his friends around. Luke would play football with boys who were five years older than him.

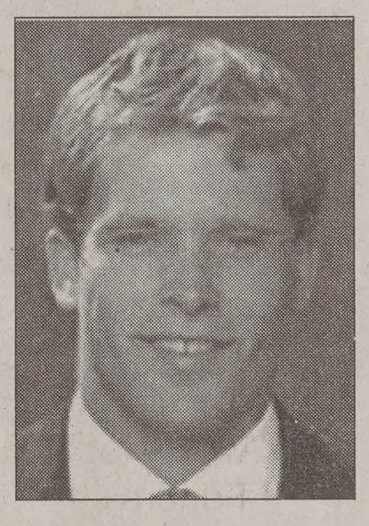
"We used to beat him up pretty good," Dustin said. "But he learned to compete with older kids. He proved he could hang in with us."

By the time Dustin returned from his mission, Luke had developed.

"I got to come off a mission and see him full grown. He turned into such a good player," Dustin said.



Luke Staley



Dustin Staley

Dustin and Luke were five years apart in school and never had the opportunity to play on the same team in high school. Dustin returned to the Cougars football team in 1999 and was there to welcome in one of the top players in the recruiting class, his brother Luke.

"It had always been a dream to play at BYU," Luke said. "Plus I wanted to come here to have the opportunity to play with Dustin."

The Staleys have taken the opportunity of being together on the team to reacquaint themselves with each other.

"We lived together last year and it was good," Dustin said. "It's been nice to be together and become a little closer."

"It has been exciting," Luke said concerning playing with Dustin. "It's been an opportunity I'll never forget my entire life. I wish it could last one more year but it won't so we have to make this one the best."

Luke said he benefits from his brother's insights, wisdom and attitude.

"Dustin is a very positive person," Luke said. "Being around him helps me out. It is a learning experience for me to learn from him the things that he has done."

Luke made an immediate impact his freshman year, scoring 13 touchdowns in only eight games and followed up with seven more TD's his sophomore season.

Dustin switched to cornerback during his junior season and started seeing more playing time, including starting seven games last season.

Two games into this season, Luke is destroying opposing defenses with five touchdowns and carrying the ball more than 13 yards per carry.

Dustin is playing solid defense in the secondary with five total tackles against Tulane.

"It is one thing to get a teammate encouraging you but when it's your brother and he's a teammate, then there is that special bond between families," Dustin said.

Both Staleys continue to work hard in football with the desire to be the best. No sibling rivalries have developed, according to Dustin.

"It's been nothing but good and positive being around Luke," Dustin said. "It's good to have someone you can lean on."

The Staleys have learned to succeed on the football field. They credit it to their family and each other.

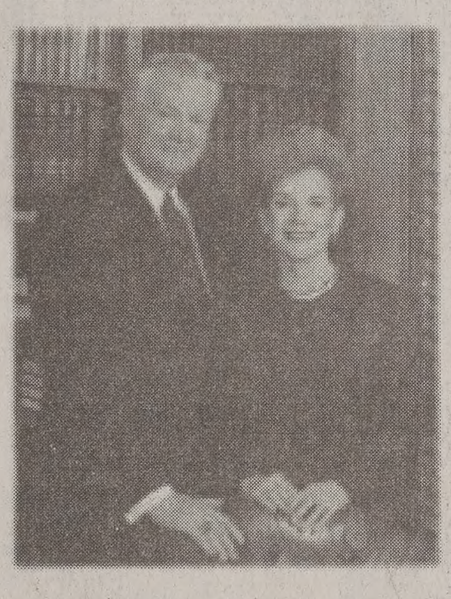
DEVOTIONAL | Tuesday, September 11, 11 a.m., Marriott Center

This devotional will also be broadcast in the JSB Auditorium.



President Merrill J. Bateman
Sister Marilyn S. Bateman

Elder Merrill J. Bateman, BYU's 11th president, is a member of the Church's First Quorum of the Seventy. He is married to Marilyn Scholes Bateman, and they are parents of seven children and grandparents of 25.

Prior to his call as a General Authority, President Bateman headed his own consulting and capital management companies. He had earlier served as dean of the BYU College of Business and School of Management (now the Marriott School of Management) and as an executive with Mars, Inc., in England and the United States.

President Bateman graduated from the University of Utah and earned a doctorate in economics from MIT. He was an Air Force Academy instructor early in his academic career.

President Bateman's administration has been directed toward continuing the emphasis on enhancing the quality of BYU's education while seeking ways to serve more students. In these endeavors he has led a continuing effort to strengthen the religious foundations of the university.

Elder Bateman has served the Church as a missionary, ward bishop, stake high councilor, stake president, and regional representative. He was the Church's Presiding Bishop before his calling to the First Quorum of the Seventy.

Sister Bateman attended BYU, the University of Utah, and LDS Business College. She has served the community as PTA president, as a curriculum committee member of the Provo School District, and as a board member of the Utah County Symphony Guild. She has served the Church as a district missionary, stake Young Women president, and counselor in Young Women and Relief Society stake presidencies, as well as in leadership and teaching positions in ward women's auxiliaries.

Macedonian parliament agrees to peace process

Accord allows NATO to collect Albanian arms

Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Macedonia's peace process cleared a crucial test Thursday as parliament backed its overall framework and opened the way for NATO to resume collecting weapons from ethnic Albanian rebels.

The vote passed 91-19, with two abstentions, following a nearly weeklong process in which many lawmakers assailed the pact but conceded the consequences of defiance were too grave.

NATO immediately began talks with the rebels on picking a site to restart weapons collection, possibly as early as Friday, said NATO spokesman Maj. Barry Johnson. NATO has already taken more than a third of the 3,300-piece arsenal to be surrendered by the National Liberation Army, or NLA, who is seeking greater ethnic Albanian rights.

Parliament backing was vital to the effort to end the six-month-old conflict. The assembly was only asked whether to back the general concept of the accord: granting wider ethnic Albanian rights in exchange for rebel disarmament.

The difficult details come next. Lawmakers will now have to decide on the specific constitutional changes.

Under the accord, brokered by American and European mediators, ethnic Albanians would receive greater political autonomy and authority to use Albanian as the official language in some areas. Ethnic Albanians make up about a third of the nation's 2 million people.

The European Union has offered the nation increased aid if the peace process moves forward, and on Thursday NATO Secretary-General Lord Robertson praised the parliament's "historic" vote.

"With this vote, the democratically elected representatives of the people of (Macedonia) are bringing their country closer to the European family of nations," Robertson said in a statement from Brussels.

After the vote, Macedonian Defense Minister Vlado Buckovski said there is "evidence the process of disbanding the NLA is under way."

"I hope this will discourage even the most extremist elements among them from continuing any kind of action," he said.

"I am an optimist ... both sides are fed up with war," said NLA spokesman Nazim Beqiri.

There were signs the rebels were prepared for any contingency in case the deal stumbles later.

A group of fighters, holding semiautomatic rifles, trained in formation in Lipkovo, about 12 miles northeast of Skopje.

"We are brave soldiers," they chanted.

And an incident Tuesday underscored the tensions.

A Macedonian paramilitary gunman fired on an ethnic Albanian police officer driving near the city of Tetovo, said NATO spokesman Maj. Barry Johnson. The officer was not injured, but British NATO soldiers intervened to prevent a clash between the paramilitary unit and armed ethnic Albanian civilians, he said.

"The main goal of the world community is to prevent the development of the situation in Macedonia from leading to destabilization of the situation and not to worsen the already difficult situation in the Balkans," said Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov in Moscow.

He met with Western envoys seeking possible Russian support for an international presence in Macedonia after the NATO mission.

Spy planes will fight fire with cameras

Associated Press

ADELANTO, Calif. — Unmanned spy planes have seen combat duty in places like the Balkans and Iraq, where, from time to time, hostile fire has knocked the buzzing robots from the sky.

Now, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to use civilian versions of the remote-controlled aircraft to keep tabs on fire of a different sort.

NASA scientists put one of the slow-flying planes, called the Altus II, through its paces Thursday 3,000 feet above the Mojave Desert where a propane fire was ignited in the remote El Mirage area west Adelanto.

A sheet of orange flames danced against the backdrop of the pancake-flat desert while, in the sky, a heat-sensing infrared camera aboard the Altus beamed a stream of images of the scene back to Earth, where they were posted on the Internet.

The planes, which would cost about $2 million each, have a 55-foot wingspan that allows them to fly to 57,500 feet and remain aloft for nearly a full day.

"It allows you to be an eye in the sky," said Vince Ambrosia, a senior scientist on the First Response Experiment, or FiRE, project at NASA's Ames Research Center in the Silicon Valley.

NASA envisions deploying Altus II drones each summer and fall as high-flying fire towers to help battle the blazes that flare across the West.

Arab states reject compromise attempt

Associated Press

DURBAN, South Africa — Arab states at a U.N. racism conference rejected a second attempt at compromise Thursday on wording on the Middle East conflict. However, South African officials said they were shuttling between the Arab and European delegates, trying to work out a new compromise.

Efforts to reach agreement over another contentious issue, a proposed Western apology for slavery and colonialism, remained bogged down a day before the eight-day conference was scheduled to end.

The proposed Mideast compromise, the second South African proposal rejected by the Arab states, sought to bridge the gap between the Arabs' call for the conference to condemn Israeli practices as racist and the European Union's refusal to allow the conference to take sides in the conflict.

"This text is completely unacceptable," Palestinian Ambassador Salman el-Herfi said.

The rejected proposal recognized the Holocaust and condemned anti-Semitism and Islamophobia. A copy of the text, obtained by The Associated Press, also expressed concern "about the plight of the Palestinian people under foreign occupation" but did not specifically criticize Israel or mention Zionism.

The EU had accepted the proposal, said Koen Vervaeke, spokesman for Belgian Foreign Minister Louis Michel, who is leading the EU delegation.

"We are not fully happy but ... we consider it as a minimum response to our concerns," he said.

Disagreement over the Mideast and the legacy of slavery and colonialism threatened to derail the conference's intended goal of creating a global agreement on how to fight racism.

If negotiations over the two issues continued past the scheduled closing of the conference Friday night, the conference could be extended into Saturday and beyond to allow the talks to continue, said Sue Markham, spokeswoman for the conference.

Without a new, acceptable proposal on the Mideast conflict, the Arab states would bring the original wording of the document, which criticized Israel's "racist practices," back to the whole conference for debate, "even if it takes one or two months," el-Herfi said.

"The European group is inflexible, and they have exaggerated their position and they are covering up crimes by the Israelis against the Palestinian people. They are covering up a new holocaust against Palestinians," el-Herfi said. He also referred in anger to an Israeli helicopter attack on Palestinian militants that killed two people.

The United States and Israel walked out of the conference Monday after the Arab states rejected a compromise proposed by Norway.

Ronnie Mamoepa, spokesman for South African Foreign Minister Nkosazana Dlamini-Zuma, said South African officials were talking to European and Arab groups separately to try to work out a compromise.

In the slavery reparations talks, negotiators were working off a consolidated draft text Thursday, but no substantive progress had been made, said Marcus Gama, a spokesman for the Brazilian delegation mediating the reparations talks.

"The contested issues are still here," he said.
